

ENCOURAGING CRIME.

Spartanburg Journal.

Calling attention to a shooting scrape which occurred in the heart of Memphis, The Commercial-Appeal of that city states that one man was shot in the leg and a messenger boy was probably wounded. The man who was shot said he didn't care to prosecute and the boy is in the hospital and in no condition to prosecute. The shooter gave bond a short time after the affair and serenely goes about the city.

This is not the first time that such things have happened and unless the officials become more alert and the people themselves more aroused it will not be the last. The Commercial-Appeal makes this Memphis incident the subject of a very strong editorial on the question of law enforcement. It says:

"It is seldom that we punish those who shoot with intent to kill, who shoot and are not successful in killing, but succeed only in taking off an ear, a finger or a leg, or giving a surgeon practice in an abdominal operation. Of the number of men who kill, not one-half are punished.

"The majority are turned loose, and they acquire additional prestige in the community. In some parts killing throws an atmosphere of dignity around the killer. Basing their point of view upon the prowess of Saul slaying his thousands palling into insignificance against the prowess of David, who slew his tens of thousands, we are prone even now to look upon the taker of human life as an exhibit of qualities commanding the deepest respect.

"It is coming to pass that we have an aristocracy of killers and a gentry of near-killers. The man who has not killed anybody or has not attempted to kill anybody is regarded as not counting for much in the equation of living and letting live.

"If we were as vigorous on killing as we are about 'state-wide the practice would soon be stopped. The possession of a United States revenue license is prima facie evidence of the guilt of the holder is a seller of liquor. Why can't we have a law that when one man shoots another man, though he may be acquitted of the shooting, that the act is prima facie evidence that the shooter was carrying a pistol in violation of the law? If every man who kills in these parts was put in the workhouse 11 months and 29 days for carrying a pistol, even if he did his killing in self-defense we confidently assert that within 12 months after the enforcement of a law of this sort that the business of killing deliberately and of killing in self defense would show an appreciable decline.

"Down in Georgia the mob lynched Frank; the grand jury met and an investigating court went through some sort of legal incantations; everybody shut their eyes and ears and after a time resolved that nobody knew anything about how Frank was lynched or who did it.

"A few weeks ago we had a horrible tragedy in this city. A bird of passage from the Pacific, while sojourning in Mississippi, met up with a married man. Later she came to Memphis, and the married man, forgetting his sacred oath of faithfulness to his wife, a most estimable woman and the mother of his eight-year-old child, followed her. His conduct or her conduct, or the conduct of both, resulted finally in both being murdered. The affair is still a mystery. For three hours after the discovery of the murder it did not seem to occur to the officers to make a search for the authors of the crime. The woman's wearing apparel was stolen, and this theft, which might give a clue to the murderers, has never been cleared up.

"Such murders and shooting affairs come to pass because there is not a thorough fixing of responsibility for previous murders and shooting affairs."

It is almost impossible sometimes to account for the action of officials and jurors, more especially the latter, for, as far as this section is concerned, we believe our officials make honest efforts to bring murderers and would-be murderers to the bar of justice. But our jurors are sometimes not so conscientious, we fear, in the discharge of their duties or else very easily deceived by the pleas put up.

There must be an awakening of the people, else murder will increase.

YALE MAN'S LIFE SAVED IN COFFEE

Karl Llewellyn, the young Yale graduate, who volunteered in the 78th Prussian Infantry at the beginning of the war, owes his life to a comrade who was killed. Llewellyn was wounded at the Battle of Ypres and was left lying between the hostile lines for twelve hours. When night came he started to crawl back to the German lines, only to fall unconscious. When he recovered consciousness he saw a dead comrade lying beside him. On his belt was a flask of Coffee. Llewellyn managed to unfasten the flask, and was sufficiently stimulated by the Coffee it contained to reach the trenches.

Yet you will find people in this peaceful country today who substitute all brands of stumpt water for a cup of good coffee. If you will try the famous
